

International Graduate Forum MBA Rankings Summer 2013

The International Graduate Forum's (IGF) 2013 Summer MBA Rankings have been compiled based upon key performance indicators considered to be of interest and value to potential students. Thus, international diversity, class sizes, student work experience, faculty-to-student ratios, and faculty qualifications – both academic and professional – have been given considerable weight. With competition between business schools continuing to increase, it is important for schools to understand what students really want. Schools ranked highly by the IGF in CEO Magazine have been successful in this goal.

“The IGF’s aim is to strip away elements such as salary increases, career progression, international/gender diversity in academic boards, number of doctoral graduates from the school (and how many then return to teach at said school) and so on. We want to keep the IGF MBA Rankings simple and look at what is on offer to the student once they get to the business school of their choice. Some ‘lesser-known’ schools, that would often otherwise be marginalised, are very well positioned to service postgraduates, and our aim is to highlight this level of quality and value for future students.”
